Comments: I was born in California and have lived there for over 40 years. I believe the roundup of these wild horses is harsh, cruel, and unnecessary. As a native Californian, I value them as a part of our California landscape--one which I understand has changed over time with human intervention. Removing much of the herd is cruel, and I strongly object. I believe the horses should be allowed to remain in this area, but if there is no other option other than removal, they should be moved to a sanctuary. These horses are beautiful, sentient animals and are more than simply "invasive species" to be removed.
