Comments: Humans have deforested the entire planet before we even understand them fully. An old growth forest is now so rare that our opportunity to study and experience them are dwindling. Please do the right thing and protect ALL old growth stands in our National Parks! No old growth forest should be destroyed at this point. It is our obligation to protect what precious little "real" forests are left in the US and elsewhere. We are not the owners of the planet. The planet is our home and mother. Please protect what little remains. For the precious ecosystems and creatures that live there and for the health of the planet and the benefit of our species as well.
