Comments: I understand the importance old growth plays in our forests eco systems. However. We place too much importance on old growth to the detriment of the management of the rest of the forests. As we have learned the spotted owl does not require old growth to sustain itself. The real issue is the Bald Owl. While the Forest Service has wasted years coming to this determination, you have allowed not only second growth forests to be consumed by fire, but old growth as well.

I have never seen a Forest fire in Southern Oregon that would just burn little stuff. Fire destroys everything in its path. Then we have total devastation of our federal lands.

This new plan is DOA.
