Comments: These projects are long overdue and will help alleviate overcrowding at Snowmass.

Elk Camp seems to always need more capacity at the restaurant as there is never anywhere to sit. The expansion seems just if not small.

It is the same with Ullrhoff outdated and in need of upgrades drastically.

The kid's challenge course will help the guests who are too small to participate in the summer with the rest of their family, bringing happiness to other parts of the family.

The lifts will help alleviate high-stress traffic that tourists and locals dislike and complain about. It is one thing to think about over development of our mountains, but we also need to think about the growing needs of the future to sustain the amount of happiness we get from these activities. There will never be fewer people here and rather than fighting it, I'm glad this plan helps to sustain and improve on what we currently have.
