Comments: To whom it may concern.

As an 84 year old with 68 years hunting and using the same forest service land, I would like to comment about the area in Southern Fannin County, Georgia, near Springer Mountain, the South terminus of the Appalachian Trail.

Sixty eight years ago these woods where covered with dead standing American Chestnut trees.

Today, they are being took over with Northern White Pine trees, which will someday take over the hardwoods of the national Forest of these mountains.

Most all wildlife will suffer from hardwood mast for Winter food.
