

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 8/28/2024 4:00:00 AM

First name: mike

Last name: herz

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Do not put off management of the national forest. A hands off approach is a foolish way to manage a forest. These massive wildfires never used to be a thing when the forest service used to actually manage them. So much revenue has been lost to mention the loss for wildlife their habitat and everything else that goes with a healthy eco system. A forest floor devoid of plants animals because the forest canopy is so thick nothing can thrive. Open up NF land to logging, pre commercial thinning and commercial thinning let forest breath again. If all you did was log all the reprod that is now 50 years old you would have sustainable forest harvest while having benefits to all the issues above. Time to change the practice to active forest management.