Comments: These old growth stands of trees are treasure and should not be destroyed for profit or access to land. They are the lynch pins in extremely valuable ecosystems. The very idea that the Forrest Service would want to cut down these monuments to nature, to our previous great regard for protecting these trees, and to their intrinsic value that stands alone is disappointing to say the least. In the future if the USFS chooses to disregard and disrespect their very existence will be seen as just another example of humanities blind destruction of the natural world.
