Comments: Old growth trees/forests are incredibly important to the overall environment and wellbeing of people, animals, plant, and land. Intensive logging already destroyed almost all of the old growth forests in Northern California in the early 1900s, and it was devastating to the ecosystem. In a time that we are facing the consequences of climate change, it is incredibly irresponsible to consider large scale logging. Old growth forests must be protected now and always. I am strongly in favor of Alternative No. 3
