Comments: I live in Oregon, and I am 13 years old. I go to an outdoor school camp each year in the San Juan Islands and we have such big trees on our island where the camp is. We learn about ecology of the forest there and how old the trees are when they get that big. Literally it takes hundreds of years. When I grow up I really want there to be trees this big for my children to see and I know they are part of the whole forest of living things. The salmon that go up the streams are even part of the forest.

Please stop cutting down the biggest of the trees and save them for the future. I wish you will choose Option number three.
