Comments: Please, (please!) reconsider the Rattail logging plan. Not only does it further endanger the dwindling Spotted Owl population, it impacts the entire ecosystem. Lumber is a valuable, necessary and renewable resource. But only all age, all species logging is sustainable at this late stage of our environmental degradation. The proposed Rattail plan is clearly not a sustainable enterprise, nor is it intended to be if the USFS is being honest. The forests in and around Mt Shasta must be maintained in their (relatively) pristine state in order not to make an unsustainable island ecosystem of the Shasta bioregion. So again, please reconsider this Proposall.
