

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 9/5/2024 4:00:00 AM

First name: Mark

Last name: Jones

Organization:

Title:

Comments: For the last 35+ years the Forest service has been listening ONLY the misguided environmentalists to form forest management policies. The forest to be healthy needs more attention to harvesting and understory management to reduce the mega fires nationwide that are a direct result of the Forest Service adopted policies. More removal of dead a bug infested trees are needed. Putting unnecessary bureaucratic red tape in place to prevent active management of forest resources is a big waste of time, money, production. America needs the resources the forest provides. Putting more restrictions on forest management and uses equates to breaking the public's trust in the Forest Services management for ALL Americans many needs. Drop the idea of more bureaucratic road blocks to management.