Comments: I am retired from the US Forest Service and in the 1980 we did a lot of logging and we did not have the forest fires we have now. Our forest need to be managed either thinning, clear cuts or just getting the dead trees out. Our forest need the brush removed. We can either log it, graze it or let it burn. There is nothing wrong with logging old growth timber, if you do not it will die and fall to the ground and add fuel. We also need to do away with all the red tape and log these burned area as soon as possible.
