Comments: I am writing in opposition to logging old growth (and near old growth) forests. These forests are gems and ecological treasures to be protected, not exploited for a few bucks. They belong to all of us and are vital to the planet's health. Recent research on old growth forest in the NW proves it's significance and interdependence on salmon, for example. Logging these forests will have multiple consequences on the species of the earth, including our own species. Protect the forests.
