Comments: Repair of the Emerald Lake Quonset Hut would be an invasive, impractical, costly, and unnecessary waste of time and effort. That metal quonset hut should never have been installed in that protected wilderness region in the first place. It's a blight on the beauty of a wilderness area. Please just let that inappropriate structure continue to fall into ruin until nature has made it as invisible as possible. Please end all proposals to spend both money and effort on restoring that unsightly Quonset hut. Nature and the animals and flora that live there will breathe a sigh of relief as that hideous structure collapses further and eventually disappears, and those of us who are grateful for having pristine wilderness areas to visit while doing no harm to those beautiful environments will thank you for your good sense and dedication in protecting irreplaceable wilderness gems.
