Comments: We need our old growth forests for the survival of our planet. To fight against warming, pollution, flooding, drought. To fight against species extinction. Old growth forests are the lungs, the connective tissue and the heart of our planet and, in turn, humanity. A threat of diminishing old growth forests is assuring a bleak future for our children and grandchildren...if one at all. The old growth forests should be treated with as much dignity, care and honor as Mt. Rushmore. Are there not any places left that are not a commodity for greed? Our old growth forests are the Churches built by God- not man- and should be treated with as much sacredness and awe.
