Comments: Open lands to enjoy is something important as a part of our National heritage. Note how President Theodore Roosevelt stood for the concept. I will contrast this with the Republicans' excused attempt to ensure that land will not be in safe keeping in the public trust. As with anything their kind do nowadays I can say plainly it is not in the interest of the People of any State or the United States in general. I would urge wisdom to prevail, their wickedness to be dispelled and the purchase of that land for the good of the people be exercised. If not, mark my words, in one way or another this will later be regretted and some despicable profiteering ruse will come into plain sight from their side well after it's too late and they can walk away laughing to the bank while those they have suckered are left to suffer their misfortune.
