Comments: I just watched an amazing documentary called Crown Jewels. The film is a testament to the benefits of our national treasure of old growth forest stands. Clear cutting operations are happening in many areas of these forests in various states mincing these giants into paper pulp. Hemp could be used to make paper and is more cost effective. Old growth forests are carbon sinks, cultural treasures to many and providers for wildlife habitat. We need to strengthen the existing policy by permanently protecting these areas so they truly can remain crown jewels for all of us.
