Comments: To whom it may concern,

As an avid outdoorsman and believer in sound science, I'm am writing as strong advocate for responsible harvesting of mature hardwoods in our national forest. Not only does it provide necessary and lacking cover to imperiled ground nesting birds and other species, it also prevents wildfires that scorch are most beautiful, wild and uninhabited places on an annual basis.

Responsible timber harvest also has a positive effect on local economies, providing jobs and trickle down economics to rural areas. It is my hope that The National Forest Service will make the right decision supporting responsible timber harvest in National Forests. A diverse and healthy ecosystem makes for a better world.

. Thank you, Ben Adams.
