That said I am for the mine.

Our country needs to produce its own. This project will provide much needed and well paying jobs to Idaho. The research done has already shown that it will have minimal effect on the environment.

Sure they could go mine somewhere else, but why not have cash flow through Idaho? This mine will produce much needed metals used in electronics. It will create jobs and supporting jobs. The money from the employees and workers will be spent and used here in Idaho. I think the good far outweighs the bad.

What more, the mining company will be restoring and fixing the terrible pollution and damage that was done from the gold rush miners in the late 1800's. That has never been fixed, but now it will be, as Cumo restores as it mines. They will return the land back to a flourishing forest area void of the damage from the 1880's gold rush damage.

I think the benefit of what is mined and what it will be used for and the products it will be used in combined with the well paying jobs and the fix of the 1800's environmental catastrophe will be well worth it in the end.
