Comments: I have visited this area many times, as I have family that lives within these woods

Please do not disrupt - there's already so much wildlife that makes its home there, and they would be left homeless without the cover of the trees they're so familiar with - it would force them to move and find another home when they already have such limited choices. There's rare botanical life as well - how would that impact it?

Is this a plan that is in date? Old growth should be maintained, not destroyed - the old growth helps protect new growth and they keep their system self-sufficient

The people that make their home there also have a say - they know the land well. Please listen to them.
