Comments: I support this withdrawal.

More than half a century ago, I traveled with my family through the Black Hills.

Mining companies want one thing: to destroy whatever is in the way of what they want to extract from the Earth.

I imagine that mining company owners and top executives may like to vacation in places with pristine air and water and unspoiled forests. But you don't find these around their mines.

So the rest of us must speak to preserve these for all of us to whom they are sacred, or beloved.

One they're gone, that's it. They're. gone forever.
