Comments: I have the good fortune to steward and protect the headwaters of a small stream in southern Oregon. During drought periods Forest Creek continues to flow while media urges us to save "every last drop." I wonder when we'll get around to saving the very first drop, the headwaters of all the small feeder streams that make the rivers. I support this Withdrawal for numerous reasons, the most important of which is protecting the headlands of that very first drop. Industry has not served our environment well and it is the government agencies that manage these resources who must stand firm and protect the lands we all live on.
