Comments: Let Mother Nature choose where to burn. The Forest Service proposal represents a huge human-driven manipulation of Wilderness, something at which humans have done a very poor job.

From a wilderness perspective, it is far better to allow natural, lightning-caused fire to play its role, rather than to invade Wilderness to cut down "undesirable" trees and burn forests based on human wishes and desires. Once those trees are gone, they are gone. There is no going back.

We need to stop the massive burning project for the Sequoia and Sierra National Forests in California. Those forests cover 2.4 million acres-including all 866,741 needed acres of designated Wilderness on both national forests. Let nature take its course. Nature is a lot wiser than humans have ever been.
