Comments: The Black Hills is sacred ground and when I had a tour of the reservoir, I was awed by the Osprey nest and the parents feeding their juvenile with fish caught in the reservoir. Tourism and particularly eco tourism and nature trips bring folks to the black hills where they spend t copious amounts of money. When we tabled an event for children we had families from all over come and it was a joy to see the love of nature and enthusiasm so apparent. Please remember all of the places with abandoned mines, contamination like in Lead and Rileys Pass and preserve and hold sacred what we still have right now for the next generation and the next:)????
