Comments: We have sacrificed so much of the natural resources of our beautiful Black Hills to exploit its mineral resources, it is time to stop. It seems that each time I go down a road I see a new quarry. And the mines have left us with acid mine drainage and scars that seem irredeemable. The term "reclamation" is not actually correct, since the landscape is not as it was. Ecosystems are complicated things that are can only be made superficially whole with current remediation methods. We are kidding ourselves to think otherwise. Please protect what is left.
