Comments: To the Forest Service comment reviewers of the Morgan Nesbit logging project:

As a life long Oregonian, I sincerely appreciate the time you have taken to read every comment received on this project as well as past and future forest service projects. You have a huge responsibility for keeping the wild in the few remaining areas we have in the U.S., including the Hells Canyon National Recreational Area (HCNRA). With that said, logging roads should not be allowed, even if temporary. The interruption these roads bring have long-term consequences to the ecosystem. As you are aware, the HCNRA has higher protection restrictions, set in place by Congress. You're in a unique position to ensure the natural sustainability of this area. Please take to heart the importance of the protective restrictions set by Congress, including no logging roads.
