Comments: Because as we have seen, the planting of trees without proper forethought and consultation of indigenous tribes can lead to a lack of biodiversity and an increase in likelihood for forest fires, it is crucial that this renewal to the northwest fire plan include the proposed beneficial fire language in the draft environmental statement, as well as authorizing the tribal inclusion components. As someone who cares deeply about the environment and natural spaces, it is painful to imagine a world in which we do not have natural spaces due to commercial interest or mismanagement. As well as offsetting carbon emissions and holding a culturally important place in many indigenous tribes, forests are a place of peace, of understanding that we are one among many living things on this earth, a quiet humbling. They contain important biodiversity and endangered animals who must be protected.
