Comments: I'm aware that burying the lines is expensive. However, the scenic value is worth it. If we continue to develop and industrialize the Sedona area it will lose its economic value as a destination for people around the world. People don't travel to look at power lines and our economy is based purely on tourism. I'm sure that the cost of burying the lines will be passed onto the consumer so there isn't a true economic argument from APS. I'm aware that my comments are being submitted after the deadline. I was out of the country and I wasn't aware of the comment period. Please take my comments under consideration. Thank you. -Alex
