Comments: To whom it may concern,

Below are my comments about the Webster Cliff Trail Relocation at the White Mountain National Forest (WMNF).

As the alignment is steep and has become eroded; the trail structures are falling into disrepair because of increased use and increased intensity of rain events, and the steep slope upon which the trail was originally built.

As the current tread is adjacent to a steep cliff I understand that there are no suitable locations for the trail outside of wilderness.

I understand that taking action will bypass the worsening section of erosion in the current trail alignment thereby creating a more sustainable alignment.
