Comments: How strongly can I object to logging old growth forest in this era of climate change. There should be no further logging of old growth forest, especially in the name of "raking the forest floor" which is scientifically ineffective, when home hardening should be the focus of our government funding. There is no need to cut forests that are most effectively sequestering carbon, which our old growth is. Instead let us focus on home hardening such as flame retardant roofs, vent screens and establishing a perimeter around vulnerable structures. The government should be helping with measures that are within 100 feet of vulnerable homes, not logging far away from homes to get a profit out of citizen's miseducation. Stop this misleading campaign to log in the name of fire safety.
