Comments: I am asking that you go very careful when cutting additional timber in older growth lands. Those lands are home to many varieties of vegetation, birds and animals

It is important to consider the wild life that lives any any of the forest which are harvested. While it is true trees may eventually grow again. the time it takes for the habitat to again develop for the animals and birds presently living there is much to much. We need to consider not the immediate needs but those of our children.

Please do not run rough shod over the current program with it's safety nets.
