Comments: I want to express some concerns about the Lacy Lemoosh project. This project is directly behind my property (I own 40 acres). I was looking at a map of the project, and it looks like there is a road coming directly toward my fence. This will cause us great problems. This road will allow people to get to my property. People don't respect private property signs, hunters will be able to get to our property. People go around locked gates all the time, especially on 4-wheelers. Can't you keep any roads away from my property.

We have some prize cows that wander our property including near our fences. These steers are pets, they are approximately 6 years old, and one of them is a Jersey that stands about 6 1/2 feet tall at his head, which is very unusual. They others are also very big. If the fence get cut by a trees falling on it, my cows will be able to get out, and if a tree falls on one of them it will kill them. These pet cows a gentle and curious and they might want to see what's going. Because of their size, they cannot be corralled, they are too big and they need to be able to walk around, at their size they could have a heart attack if they can't move enough.
