I fully support the creation of a shuttle service as an additional method to access the trails in Big Santa Anita Canyon. That being said, it would be nice to have more information on what entity would have ownership and management of the actual shuttles. All I gather from the current plan is the Forest Service creating a designated shuttle parking spot in the hopes that someone will run a shuttle service in the future. I'm pretty sure that's not something the Forest Service is going to take on, so who is?
Additionally, I have to make a plea for the Forest Service to address the lack of bathroom facilities at Hoegee's campground. Any Forest Service work being done in the Big Santa Anita without developing a serious plan for reinstalling these bathrooms is simply a misprioritization of what's important in keeping the canyon safe for it's users. It's time to focus on solutions to this problem rather than the obstacles blocking it's completion.
