Comments: This project threatens to destroy a protected natural area, pollute a water source, and will destroy a Native American sacred site. We live in a time when these three resource are on a chopping block just so the economic machine can consume. When are we going to say no to the destruction of our limited resources just so we can have some form of temporary comfort.

Pe'Sla should remain untouched and protected for the history and sacredness of the Native American peoples and if not that, it should be protected and left alone to protect the natural water resource. Something every creature depends on to survive and should be protected by our natural rights as human beings to live a prosperous life.
