Comments: Our Family have been hiking here since 2005 before the road washed out. We used to take kids to the suspension bridge and Carbon Glacier. After the park entrance was moved back it became difficult for younger kids to make it round trip to ipsut creek campground. The carbon river entrance is close to the seattle/Tacoma but the last 10 miles is remote. There isn't cell service there making it a place your family and friends can unplug. It has hikes ranging from easy to difficult. Its a great drop off point for the wonderland trail. Mowich Lake is a beautiful lake. We bought a house near the ranger station. As the population grows along the I5 corridor people look for outdoor recreation. This is a great location. I hope there is improvements done to improve accessibility and opportunity.
