Comments: At a time when all federal public lands are on the chopping block, Eric Jacobsen's and Thomas Knowles's purchase should be met with resistance. There must be a clearly laid out plan of any expansion, renovations, and the wastewater system available for comment and public objection. Montana is built upon public lands that have seen thousands of years of intricate relationships and stewardship. It is the reason why our communities can enjoy these sacred spaces, open to all. Jacobsen and Knowles must operate Holland Lake Lodge with complete respect to our local communities, the fragile lake ecosystem, and the generations of Montanan's to come. This will NOT become a lake resort - another destination that is too expensive for local communities to afford. Let this continue to be a space of public community congregation. Every detail of development and renovation must be explicitly stated for public commentary and suggestions. Holland Lake will always be a heart of our community.
