Comments: protect Pe' Sla, one of the most sacred places - located high in the Black Hills - to the Lakota People and many other tribes. Threw out history sites seen as sacred by Indigenous people world wide have been desecrated or nearly destroyed. This is also a violation of Indigenous people's rights to the protection of their sacred sites. This sacred territory frequently used by many Lakota People. The mining of this sacred site would have negative environmental impacts. Some of those environmental impacts would be pollution of the water and land. It would also cause the disruption of traditional ceremonial practices for Lakotas.
