Comments: I'm asking you to take a walk in the beautiful forest, where the lost river project is projected to take place. You should take a moment to see what a travesty a logging operation would be in that amazing forest. I've been to some of the areas in other projects you performed, where you "selectively cut." It looks like clear cutting to me. You use that term "selectively cut" to fool the public, but I've been there. You're not managing the forest. You're just going in there and cutting it down. There's no justification for what you call management of the national forest. You're just harvesting the lumber and doing at a loss to the taxpayers.

How do you sleep at night after doing so much damage to these beautiful forests. You should be ashamed of yourselves.
