Comments: As an American, I deeply value the forests and wildlife of this continent. I also respect the first peoples of this country and fully believe that a place's sacredness in Indigenous culture should protect it from destruction. It is an outrage that private entities are able to buy and destroy land that should not be owned by anybody, but should be loved by all. This project, despite some claims to the contrary, would ruin this ecosystem forever, for humans and all other species. It might never recover. What right does a company have to take this away from all of us?
