Comments: Native American history in the United States is recorded as being genocidal, power and land grabbing by those in Government. Today, racism manifests in terms of disrespect for their land held sacred and in trust for future generations. Fracking for minerals, oil, gold, silver, uranium, etc., deforestation especially in areas known to have medicinal plants, deforestation causing soil erosion and degradation to flora and fauna has been evidencing for centuries! The time is now to respect and honor sacred lands and sacred waterways, and all life thereon! Respecting and Honoring Native American culture and their heritage as stewards, not exploited of the Creation that was theirs before European invasions greed took over! Co-Stewardship working towards conservation is imperative and tantamount to the future of all people no matter what color or race they are. Humans share this planet Earth, our Mother Earth. The survival of humans, animals, everything ever Created, depends on our willingness, our ability, our shared responsibility, to take care of everyone's needs, not just those of a select few! Mitákuye Oyás'í? is a Lakota prayer, speaking to the Oneness of all life. Surely at this time in human history, we can truly honor, respect and be stewards over our Mother Earth, together, as One people. This is my prayer. I hope this will be your prayer too.
