

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 7/11/2025 3:35:57 PM

First name: Margaret

Last name: MacNiven

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Just want to say that you could leave the hut alone and it will disintegrate over time. Maybe one trip out there to pick up the littered timbers. No need for helicopter flights and jack hammers. Think about the historical significance of old disintegrating buildings in say Skara Brea in the Orkney islands off Scotland, and the remnants of Hadrian's Wall. They're just sitting there as relics of past times. A hiking history of the area is not hugely exciting, but it is a history.

Furthermore, I'm sure the Forest Service is running short of money, here is a nice savings.

Thank you for your attention.

Margaret MacNiven