Comments: Mount Timpanogos Wilderness be wild by allowing the metal remnants of the Quonset hut to fade with time or by using wilderness-compatible means to remove it. The remaining rock and cement could be safely dismantled and allowed to fade back into the Wilderness.

Farmers and Ranchers do this all the time. There are so many remains that it gives artists plenty of scenes to paint. No special means are needed to "clean it up". Let the concrete and stone wear and fall apart.

The Forest Service's first responsibility is to protect the wild character of the Mount Timpanogos Wilderness. The agency's own wilderness policy recognizes that a structure is not needed for visitor use, stating that visitors must be prepared on their own to face "inherent risks of adverse weather conditions, isolation, physical hazards, and lack of rapid communications, and that search and rescue may not be as rapid as expected in an urban setting."

Save some time and money and scrap this unnecessary work. Thank you for your time and attention. Your work to preserve the wild is greatly appreciated.
