Comments: Hello, it is understood that the Wilderness Act prohibits structures, with the exception for those that are minimally necessary to preserve Wilderness. I cannot think of a more idiotic building to be built than the Quonset hut in the Mount Timpanogos Wilderness. Preserve wilderness by bringing in motorized equipment, cement mixers, and jackhammers. Not to mention invading the space with plenty of helicopter visits, and of course you got to carve out a landing area for that.

This building has been crumbling and in disrepair for years. Justification as a means to preserve Wilderness is preposterous on its face and flies in the face of protecting the wild character of the Wilderness. Have other alternatives even been considered? Like dismantling the structure?

Why are my tax dollars being used to even consider a rebuild? I could find thousands of other more practical and helpful projects for my money. Let's please consider the intent of the Wilderness Act and all of the views of the public, not just one particular well-monied subsets.

Regards
