Comments: The Black Hills in South Dakota have inspired generations of Americans. Their beauty and grandeur are home to abundant wildlife and provide recreational opportunities for many Americans and visitors from around the world. They hold the mysteries of earth's development and tell the more recent story of America's rugged past and Westward movement. As Americans, we have a shared responsibility to protect and celebrate the land in all its natural beauty. Please do all you can to ensure that the Black Hills are preserved for future generations
