

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 7/22/2025 8:24:11 PM

First name: Al

Last name: Barrus

Organization:

Title:

Comments: I am commenting on the large numbers of commercial outfitters in the BTNF. During hunting season the overcrowding of outfitters is ridiculous. There is an outfitter behind every tree. Not only do they occupy the best backcountry camp areas but they treat the general public like trespassers and invaders of their private land. It is nearly impossible to escape them. The close proximity of their camps makes it very tough to hunt without having confrontation with them. It seems that about every five or six miles in every direction you are bound to run into one or another of these outfitters, and the way their "day "trailing) permits" are set up , it allows them to congregate even more so on any given area. How about a bit more regulation on these excessive numbers of outfitters in the BTNF.