Comments: Hey guys, I live and recreate in and around the Bridger Teton National Forest. It is the most special assortment of public acreage in the world to me. And it does need updates and adjustments to its management plan of course. All I'd ask is that we take the time and necessary resources to gather all the pertinent scientific data we can as well as to discuss that data with all the professionals and public at length before making any decisions that will affect the forest, it's critters, and how we and our children and grandchildren will use the land. I hunt, fish, hike, camp, and dream in the Bridger Teton Nat'l Forest, and if we all work together and use our heads, many many more generations will do the same after we're gone.
