Comments: I have previously worked on this district and it is long overdue for fee areas, restrooms, and parking solutions to accommodate the massive crowds that visit in the summer. I would recommend selling an annual pass (perhaps calling it the White River National Forest pass or the Dillon Ranger District pass) that would cost somewhere between $15 and $35. From observing a similar program on another forest, a pass like this would mostly be bought by local residents and act as sort of a smaller version of the America the Beautiful pass, allowing holders to visit applicable day use fee areas whenever.
