Comments: These poor horses have been through hell just trying to survive, now you're gonna finish them off like this? I always thought that the United States and people who ran the national parks things love animals and worked hard to preserve our ecosystem and help keep the balance of nature. This just seems like pure cruelty these horses don't hurt anybody they're not hurting anything or anybody. I've lost many of them this last summer because of the drought and all the mud that they sunk in slowly and suffocated. Even though the advocates of the Heber Horses begged and tried repeatedly for help or to let them help the horses taking them water, fencing these mud bogs so this animals would not try to desperately get drinks out of the mud holes and get stuck in them struggling mares suffered trying to help their foals from drowning in this mud. While the forestry supervisor would not allow anyone to help them. That is so cruel and stupid.

Please let them live out their lives w their herds/ families and continue to be a big part of the natural beauty of the west, drawing tourist in to see them and keep our forest lands healthy and helping stop wild fires.
