Comments: Public lands are a great asset that sets the United States apart from other countries. These beautiful resources are meant to be preserved while balancing responsible usage. Back country airports give great access while keeping the areas clean. The value of back country strips can't be over stated. They allow recreation and the ability to experience the land without cutting down trees or disturbing the area around the strip. They are valuable to public services, such as EMS, police, and local government for maintaining the forest and recreational areas. I look forward to flying in soon and enjoying the beauty of the local area.

Thank you
