Comments: We have lived in the Blue Mountains of Oregon since December 1989 as permanent year around residents. We own timber land and previously grazed cattle within the Blue Mountains.

We recommend a holistic approach that ensures scientific methods that incorporate ongoing best practices to managing the vast land and the incredibly diverse species of the Blues. We encourage partnerships among the Tribes, particularly the CTUIR, and other stakeholders. Ongoing threats such as climate change, wildfires, loss of species and habitat, change in water and air quality, open access to roadless areas, unregulated mining and timber harvest must be addressed in an ongoing management plan. We suggest frequent public input into the Forest Management Plan.
